longkong, Saturday, August 19, 1882

DANIEL EDWARD BANDMANN, actor and tragedian, has again appeared in his true putting himself outside the pale of an honourable colors, and in a fashion which must afford a vast deal of gratification to Sir George Philappo, and the gentlemen who composed the jury in the recent libel case; more especially after the disgraceful disclosures made public by the eminent one's sudden and not particularly creditable flight from this Colony. Whatever opinions may exist as to the justice of the decision arrived at in the BANDMANN v. FRASER-Smith cause câlèbre, we feel quite assured. that it will be universally admitted by 'all disinterested persons that the plaintiff had little reason to complain of the result of the trial. Suymork most certainly received his pound of flesh, if not rather more | Straits Intelligence, 9th August, 1882. than his just due. Surlock, however, does not appear to be satisfied with phantly inform us that the "editor" of the his pound of flesh; like poor Oliver | Singapore Straits Intelligence is Mr. CARMI-Twist he greedily asks for more. PRESS PRIVILEGES.

BANDMANN Y. FRASBR-SMITH.

The fundamental privileges of the press are common to every British subject, and they are freedom of speech and pen. But in wicked hands this great privilege becomes dangerous on accoun of it degenerating into license. In the case newspapers this license tends to intrude into the privacy of life and proclaim on the housetops that which should only be known in the home, circle. This is particularly noticeable in society journals. When a public man is criticised from malevolent_motives as a private individual Land when his domestic actions are subjected to condemnation in order to undermine his public reputation or character, then the newspaper transgressing its right and abusing its privileges. Fair or candid criticism on subjects where the writer feels that he has a moral duty to perform, or to protect a legitimate public interest comes within the privileges of a newspaper. Fair comments on the public acts of public men are al lowable. But where a journalist writing from a cacoethes scribendi wilfully and falsely, and maliciously injures the good name of an institution or individual then he places himself within the ban of the law which can be invoked against

If comments too on public men are made a medium for private malice or exceed the bounds of fair criticism or by falsely imputing improper motives, even if the belief in such motives existed, they are actionable. This is a general exposition of the law on the subject which has no respect for persons and which is as much binding on the individual as on the institution known as a newspaper. The tyranny of the press is the worst species of tyranny on account of the subjective character of its operations. And when a newspaper becomes a terror to respectability brigands in some countries are the scourge of the community, it is time for honest journalists toact like law abiding people and help to bring the offender to justice by expressing their abhorrence of his conduct. This has been done in Hongkong where press privileges have been rankly abused by a person named Fraser Smith, and he has suffered one of the consequences-legal punishment. This person having a printing, office at his disposal, started a newspaper called the Hongkong Tele graph, and commenced operation by abusing ill who differed from him. His hand was against every one, and every man's liand was against him, though many were frightened to repel his attacks, in the coarsest of language he assaulted Editor" and not to individual members of the individuals and institutions alike, and when argument failed he had recourse to the last re-Communications intended for publication must | source of lampoonists-that of raking up ununblushing effrontery. The man was a perfect musance. He was like a mad dog snarling and frothing at every one, and running "amok" through the place and biting the first man he met, and by some he was held to be a perfect terror. By the lower class he was admired. There is always a class who mistake Billingsgatism for fine writing and continual journalistic swearing as exhibition of talent, and such people were the supporters of the Telegraph. He attacked Herr Bandmann most slanderously and villified him most atrociously. Herr Band mann then proceeded against him criminally for libel: The defendant was able to prove nothing, and he only showed that he had passed the boundary of ordinary impudence and shamefacelliess. He was found guilty and the Chief" Justice sentenced him to two months' imprisonment. Pending and after the pronouncing of sentence the Telegraph made two confession of repentance, then retracted, then printed more libel and finally went into gnashing of teeth at the judge and society in general for relegating its chief "Behind-the Bars." The plaintiff in the case did good service for the Colony in defending his fair fame from the aspersions of a low and upprincipled writer, for he once caused it to be shown that this man could not, assail with impunity the characters of individuals, nor could be when once convicted escape with a nominal penalty. In passingsentence on the defendant, His Honour clearly intimated that in the case of a journalist, profession, like Mr. Fraser Smith did, he would be treated like a criminal in this respect, and that his journalistic character should either miligate for increase his sentence. The defendant had been a nuisance to the community, and bore a bad character as the conductor of his journal, (so bad that no newspaper recognised him as belonging to the profession), and His Lordship passed a heavier sentence on him than he would have done in the case of a man who perliaps had been more sinned against than sinning. We agree with the opinion of the Judge on this point, and we heartily concur in the step he has laken to show that a course of vile slander shall meet with commensurate punishment when the offender

The sentence of the court meets with our approval, and we trust that it will deter journalistic outlaws and braves of the pen from adopting such a line of conduct as that which has placed Mr. Fraser Smith " Behind the Bars."-Singapore Mr. Bandmann'is good enough to trium-

We next heard of this CARMICHAEL, as being on the staff of the Shanghai Courier, and a few weeks ago he paid us a visit at Peddar's The visit was an interesting one. as the libel case was then under way, and Carmichael, who was at daggersdrawn with the great Daniel on account of certain criticisms, and the, skit "Dragic Bower," which appeared in the Courier, was able to give us a lot of information concerning Mr. Bandmann's conduct in the Model Settlement, which did not redound to the tragedjan's credit. In fact, CARMICHAEL, in the presence of two members of our staff, and a gentleman wholis still in Hongkong, abused Band-MANN far worse than we had ever done under intense provocation. We lately heard of CARMICHAEL through the columns of the Shanghai Mercury. . Our contemporary informed its readers, in effect, that Carmichael had been a curious sub-editor of the Curio, and that he had bade "good bye" to the Settlement under rather shady circumstances, leaving a good many debts behind him. Nay, more, on reflection we are almost certain that the Mercury did make some reference to the Straits Intelligence, and to an article which had appeared in that publication metaphorically comparing Singapore to the Garden of Eden, and Shanghai to Sodom and Gomorrah. Why, then, it may be that the "editor" of the Straits Intelligence and the Australian larrikin are one possible that the jackal and the jackass have lain down together? Can it be pos-

J. B. Houston, President of the Pacific Mail Company, said there was no foundation for the report in any shape whatever. The company had no contract with any transatlantic steamship lines. The line was doing a good business, but not greater than had been the case for some time. Should the Sucz Canal be closed to commerce by any war in Egypt, the business of the Pacific Mail and the Australian route would be greatly increased.

Our contemporary observes, commenting on this sentence that there's nothing like a free (and easy) country. We beg to differ, at all events so far as this particular offence is concerned. Had Mr. Mullane been tried for manslaughter in Hongkong, which is the reverse of a free country, an enlightened jury would promptly have acquitted him; but, on the other hand, had he been tried for self from the contemptible and unprovoked attacks of a foul-mouthed blackguard, his atrocious crime would have drawn down on his head the vengeance of outraged justice. He would have gone to gaol. 'The law is a strange study here as elsewhere.

Anour half-past nine on Thursday morning, Chinese lukong No. 190 tobserved a crowd-of over a hundred Celestials congregated on Praya Central, to whom a brickhyer named-Chun Achan was busily engaged in selling Tsz Fa lettery tickets. He arrested the man, who was this morning fined $50 or a month's hard labor, by Mr. Wodehouse. Failing to produce the Mexicans, the bricklayer went to join another pretty considerable crowd in Victoria Gaol. Mr. Hung Kam Sing, second interpreter at the Police Court, gave a graphic description to the Magistrate of the modius operandi of the Tsz Fa swindle. According to his account, the lottery consists of 36 names or sign, embracing cockroaches, white-ants, frogs, centipedes, scorpions, cobras and other harmless things. It is open to the speculator to stake what he pleases on any of the signs. Some time during the day the swindle is opened, and the winning sign, previously chosen by the managers, announced. Should you have pinned your faith on a cockroach, for instance, and that interesting insect turn np trumps, you receive thirty times the amount of your stake. A number of men, the interpreter said, make a living by acting as brokers between the public and the Tsz Fa swindling establishments, of which there are two in the Colony, which drive a roaring trade, over a thousand dollars being staked daily at the two establishments. Women, domestic servants, and coolies are the principal patronisers of Tsz Fal the women going in "big licks." The decision in the appeal case in the Wai Sing lottery business last year gave an impetus to Tsz Fa, as the police since then had not interfered with the swindle so much as before, and the interpreter said that a fine of $200 would not be felt by the establishment. Sergeant Quincey also made a contribution to the literature of the Tsz Fa fraud, corroborating everything the interpreter said, and adding that the winning sign was put into an earthenware box and opened twice a day, at 6 a.m. and 4 p.m., in the public street or any place where the police did not happen to be about. We really think that severe measures should be taken to suppress a swindle which absorbs so much of the hard earnings of the native community, and we have reason to believe that the speculation in Tsz Fa is not confined to the Chinese.

As will be seen by advertisement, Chiarini's

Royal Italian Circus and Menageric will shortly visit us; they are on the way down from Shanghai by the French Mail. Additions to the many 'attractions of this mammoth Show have been made since Signor Chiarini left Hongkong. Gilbert Sarony of the "Tourist Troupe" has been engaged for the side-splitting business. Sarony is , a well-known funny man, and should prove a great draw; his humour, unless he has much altered since we last saw him in Australia, is about as pungent as fifty-horse-power mustard poultice, and his singing and dancing abilities are of a very high order... The Imperial Shimidzu Japanese Troupe have also been engaged, and will doubtless attract many Wodehouse this morning charged with creating | people to Bowrington. The Standard anticipates that the effect in Egypt of the bombardment of the forts of Alexandria by the English fleet when all the other armaments of Europe shrank from the operation. will be magical. Hy a few cannon shots we have recovered the ground lost by months of feeble diplomatising, of shilly shallying ultimatums, and incredible forbearance. It will now be understood that, having once struck, England will strike again, and yet again, and again once more until the ends sho has proclaimed to be neces sary have been attained. Nor is it in Egypt alone that the reverberation of our guns will produce a wholesome and in the end pacific effect. It was about time that the millions of Asiatics who have the good fortune to live under our just and civi-"lising rule should convince themselves that benevolence is not our only virtue, but that to consideration for others we add justice to ourselves, and with an earnest love of peace we combine no fear of war. Those Powers, too, nearer home that have lately traded on our supposed amiability will now be better informed of our character. The moment is favourable for a proper settlement of the Egyptian question—for a settlement conformable to our interests and requirements It is to be hoped that it will not be allowed to slip away, and that we shall not show ourselves poorer at the council-board than we have shown. durselves in action.

The Times thinks that Arabi has received a lesson which neither he nor those who supported him, whether openly or secretly, are at all likely to forget. The position of the English flect at Alexandria is rendered secure for the future, and Arabi is probably convinced by this time that if the provocation is renewed the lesson will be repeated. The indirect effects of the engagements are likely to be no less' important than the direct effects. The recent events certainly male it less likely than ever that the Porte will consent to execute the will of Europe. But they unmistakably show that, whether the Porte does the work or not, the work itself will be done. The English Government has not acted without full consideration for the susceptibilities of other Powers, the Porte included. But it has acquired the conviction, sustained by every proof of which such a conviction is capable, that there is no security either for the tranquillity of Egypt itself or for the established interests of the European, Powers in the country so long as the Arab remains unsubdued, and on that conviction it has neted. On that conviction it will continue to act until the end is accomplished. The Powers of Europe may have doubted its determination at one time, but they can doubt it no longer. Nor, on the other hand, have they shown any disposition to question the propriety of its action. The Times does not hesitate to say that the effect of England's determination has been to produce the most fayourable impression both on public opinion and on the judgment of statesmen is

The Daily Telegraph is sare that this strong and stern course on the part of Her Majesty's Government must be cordially approved and heartily supported by all patriotic persons. No dissatisfaction on the part of weak allies, false friends, or astonished diplomatists should cause the urgent circumstances of the case to be forgotten. In following up this energetic policy to the end, with a determination to suppress the mutiny of the Arab colonels, and to place the Canal beyond their power of mischief, the Government deserves, and will receive, public applause and support. Their course, may have leranged more than one ingenious and secret combination; but it has been in this last step the lieve" and "if we recollect rightly" occupy pro-minent places, has a quiet behind-the-door dig and those who complain of it will not find factious echoes here. Its effect upon the Porte and upon, the Conference remains yet to be developed; but, just as Englishmen will not be displeased to learn that the mutineers under Arabi have made a good lished in other quarters as to the mission of fight-and-given our blue-jackets plenty of hard the Vang-2000 and her freight of 500 soldiers." work, so their spirits, will be raised to see the. Queen's flag flying alone and unassisted in a duty specially devolving upon the chief naval Power. All that the situation now needs is resolution and straightforward conduct.

The Daily News believes that the situation has been so completely changed by recent events that it is scarcely worth while to speculate on what might otherwise have been the attitude of the Porte. But If it was intended to make use of his authority in the way of intervention or otherwise, the destrution of the fortifications of Alexandria will not have facilitated that design. One immediate result of the hombardment cannot be welcomed in England. The Suez Canal has been, closed against mercantile traffic by order of the English Admiral. The Daily Acres can only hope that the protest of M. Victor Lesseps, chief agent of the Canal Company, against this probeeding will not excite in France any feeling of irritation against England. M. Gambetta spoke in one of the Bureaux of the Chamber of the danger lest others should aggrandise themselves at the expense of France; and M. Gambetta. should have remained silent and satisfied, though though neither in office nor in power, may represent in this respect a real popular sentiment The position in which we stand is a critical one. The Daily News enfnestly trusts that more serious steps still may not be taken, and that more blood may not be shed.

The Scotsman maintains that, in spite of the grave nature of the step, there will be general satisfaction that the ironclads have spoken. Arabi has now had an opportunity of learning how heavily we can strike; and if anything short of complete annihilation is likely to rouse him from his fool's paradise, it is such a lesson as he received yesterday. Now that we have once let slip the dog of war our course of action is to a certain extent removed from our own control The true policy in the circumstances is simply full preparation, and ability to strike home when the emergency arises. The Glasgow Herald perceives that if there are difficulties abroad for the Government thereare others at home. While this proof of an' whence he drew his graphic picture of the Triad | ability to engage in a spirited foreign policy is distressing to the Torics, who thought they had a monopoly of that sort of thing, it is regarded with much concern by the Radicals, who, by their platform performances, are deeply pledged to hoped in the public interest, pretty nearly ex- non-intervention. On the principle which had so much vogue at the elections—that Britisl interests are as nothing compared with the development of national institutions—the policy of the Government cannot be defended at all. Whatever stake we may have in our highway to India, it must go by the board so long as Arabi is allowed by his countrymen to retain the elevation to which he has hoisted himself. To such a school of politicians it does not matter that Arabi is nothing more than a military despot who has rebelled against his Sovereign, broken the treaties by which his country is bound, and tyrannises over a people that, only wants, union to overthrow him. If we are to lose all concern for British interests merely because this adventurer has succeeded up to this time, then the Government have made a mistake which they will not easily defend when their policy is de-

The Irish Times is of opinion that the bombardment of Alexandria, if not a naval operation that brings us much glory, was carried out in such a way as to show that gunners and seamen, as of old, are equal to greater tasks. The fleet has probably no further work assigned to it; but Arabi and his army must do something that will render additional steps necessary. It is of vast importance that they cannot effect a retreat to Cairo if the fleet have orders to stop them from going there. The protest of the Sucz Canal Company under the Lesseps influence is the idlest use of words.
